The secret lives of mountain lion kittens

Mark Elbroch

Lead Scientist, Puma Program, Panthera

Join us for a visual and anecdotal presentation on the little-known lives of mountain lion kittens. Mark will share research conducted locally in and adjacent to Grand Teton National Park, supported by footage captured by motion-triggered cameras in dens, around kill sites, and at bedding areas. He will also highlight Panthera's research quantifying changes in the local mountain lion population, and the current challenges faced by mountain lion kittens in particular as they grow, play, and try to survive long enough to become independent adults of their own.

Steve Winters
National Geographic

Barbecue starts at 5:30 with hamburgers, veggie burgers, hot dogs, chips, salads and dessert for a $5+ donation. The talk starts at 6:30 in the historic Berol Lodge at the AMK Ranch. Turn right when entering Leek's Marina parking lot in Grand Teton National Park.
